Ready sound, ready camera — quiet on the set

Cheating at university causes some concern

BY EVE HAWKINS

This is the third and final part of a series on cheating at BYU.

BYU students cheat. How and to what extent, no one knows for sure, but there have been enough problems with academic dishonesty to cause university leaders concern. Some campus departments have been attempting to find solutions.

When talking with other faculty members and those who have the responsibility for administering tests — "We have a problem," said Leon R. Horn, chairman of the Faculty Policy Council. Hartshorn said cheating is "rather sophisticated" but that he did not know how widespread it is. He is awaiting a report from the Academic Honesty Committee, a sub-committee of the Faculty Council.

The report (to be available in three weeks) should give the university a more concrete look at cheating on a university-wide basis. "There are incidents of cheating at all levels, but they tend to vary with the disciplines," said Eliot Butler, associate academic vice president. Butler said leaders from various colleges and departments said they did not expect a few incidents of cheating, but that problems seemed to fall in certain areas.

At the School of Management, the faculty committee found through their focus groups of eight to ten students that objective tests tend to lead to more cheating. The committee also learned that students did not have a clear understanding of what actually constituted cheating. "For example, if you have an exam from last year, is it cheating to use it (to study)?" said McKinnon.

Gray areas
While McKinnon said he thought there were very few "hard core" cheaters, there were gray areas into which a greater number of students strayed. "It is the student who walks out of the testing center and encounters someone who asks, 'How is the test?' and 'What should I study?'" Students feel a tremendous peer pressure to answer such inquiries, he said.

The committee found that students wanted the faculty to make it clear to all class members that answering questions about a test was unethical. "They wanted to be able to say: 'You know I can't talk about it.'"

To deal with the problem, the school encouraged faculty to discuss matters of integrity up front and take greater care with tests. Regarding tests, McKinnon said the faculty is expected whenever possible to ask more essay questions. Also, when they do not control the tests, they should put them on reserve so that everyone would have equal access to them for studying.

Butler also discussed the importance of administering good tests. He said that it is virtually impossible to cheat on a really effective exam, adding that he thought objective tests were "an insult to the intelligence of students." Intense pressure McKinnon said tremendous growth in the last decade forced the school to enroll more students during the last few years by "limiting the number of undergraduates we will admit at the junior level — and we do that through their grade point (average)." Each enrollment restriction "has probably created an environment of intense pressure. We had created an environment that could lead to dishonesty," McKinnon said.

'Power' is devotional topic

Elder L. Tom Perry, a member of the Council of Twelve of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will be the speaker at the concluding devotional today.

He will speak on "Staying Power," and will discuss the importance of developing character, integrity and consistency and of subscribing to basic principles.

Elder Perry has served in the Council of Twelve since 1974 and is now on the executive committee of the BYU Board of Trustees.

The 11 a.m. devotional will be broadcast live on KBYU-TV, channel 11, and KBYU-FM, 88.9.

It will be repeated on KBYU-TV Sunday at 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. and the same day on KBYU-FM at 9 p.m.

Hair-growing drug approved by panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government advisory panel on Monday recommended approval of the first drug shown to make hair grow on bald men, but with the provision that doctors be instructed to tell their patients not to expect miracles.

The panel of outside experts also told the Food and Drug Administration it expects the agency to closely monitor advertising of the product to make sure the manufacturer, Upjohn Co., does not overstate what the hair grower can be expected to do.

While an advisory committee's recommendation is not binding on the FDA, the agency typically follows its advice. C.C. Evans, the physician who heads the FDA's dermatology section, said he expects the Upjohn drug to be approved in a few months.

The Michigan company has been selling the drug — minoxidil — in Canada under the trade name Regaine since last October and plans to market it in the United States as Rogaine.

A one-month supply has been selling in Canada for about $45 in U.S. equivalent currency, but Upjohn officials declined to say how much it will cost in this country. To be effective, the drug must be taken indefinitely. If discontinued, the hair it has stimulated to grow falls out.

Minoxidil has been used in tablet form for about 20 years as a treatment for high blood pressure, and the side effect of hair growth was noted in some patients. The hair-growth version is in ointment form and only 2 percent the strength of the pill.

In reaching a unanimous decision to recommend approval, the five-member panel accepted Upjohn's finding that minoxidil indeed does stimulate hair growth and is relatively safe.

The lengthy discussion that led to the decision was replete with skepticism over just how much hair minoxidil can grow, and on how many men. The consensus was that since the drug is unlikely to have serious side effects, and can help some people, there is no reason to keep it off the market.

Study shows preschool helps children

By MELODY ZINGMARK
Universe Staff Writer

The latest findings in a 10-year study, suggest that low-risk educationally advantaged children achieve lasting gains and benefit from attending preschool.

Jean M. Larsen, professor of family sciences has completed seven years of a 10-year project and reported some of the results at a recent meeting of the National Association for Education of Young Children in Washington, D.C.

Several decades of studies based on the "deficit hypothesis" have already shown definitively that children from economically and educationally disadvantaged homes show significant benefits from quality preschool programs.

Although many studies have been done on disadvantaged children, few researchers have studied the effects of preschool on children who come from advantaged backgrounds — the purpose of the BYU project.

"Third-grade children who had attended preschool scored significantly higher on the spelling and language portions of the school achievement test than did third-grade children who had not attended preschool."

Previously Larsen has reported definite immediate gains for children who attend preschool, with the children in her study scoring higher on IQ tests than control groups at the end of preschool and again one year later at the end of kindergarten.

Larsen and her team are following five chronological groups of children from preschool through the elementary grades of public school.

Each group is composed of children who attended BYU's laboratory preschool and of similar number who do not attend, thus forming a control group.

The families of these children are overwhelmingly traditional nuclear families, with almost all living with both parents and only a small percentage of mothers working full-time.

The children who attend the preschool are given various tests at designated intervals, and their scores are compared with those in the control group.

Preschools that push young children to achieve, can be detrimental to their growth.

BYU's preschool stresses hands-on experience in a natural environment that will bring substantial benefits to the children.

Wanting young children to achieve has become a national trend to create superbabies who can read and write before preschool, observes David Elkind, internationally known child development specialist.

"With increasing numbers of young children being exposed to these inappropriate teaching methods, there is a real danger that large numbers of young children will experience learning problems at an age when in the past most children were not even in school," he said.

The BYU preschool program is unusual because it includes a parent education component that requires participation of all fathers and mothers. Instruction for parents follows an "elaboration" model, which emphasizes an experiential, natural learning process and not an academic one.

The preschool program for children based on the same model following the rational that preschool should supplement the learning occurring in a healthy home environment. "The children are involved in thinking and broadening their experience rather than learning symbols," Larsen said.

"Instead of mechanical drills on letters and numbers, we stress involvement or hands-on learning. They don't memorize 60 vocabulary words, for instance, but interact with one another and learn concepts relating to and evolving from the natural environment."

As a result, Larsen thinks the elaboration preschool experience helps children develop language and social skills as well as a healthy curiosity about life and the natural world, but not so much academic skills — a belief born out in the study's results so far.

Although broadening their experience is stressed, academic skills are not hampered by this de-emphasis in the early years.

Most of the children in the study scored well above the 70th percentile on the reading and math components of the school achievement test.

According to a BYU study, children who attend pre-school score higher on IQ and achievement tests than children who do not attend.

No spies since Pollard, says Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — No one has spied for Israel in the United States since Jonathan Jay Pollard was arrested in 1985, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Monday.

He was less emphatic in rejecting reports that other Americans were involved with Pollard, a former U.S. Navy analyst sentenced in Washington two weeks ago to life in prison for selling military secrets to Israel.

Responding to a report that others may have been giving Israel information at the same time Pollard did, Rabin said: "So far no one can present any proof ... that there are others. I don't believe it's true."

Israeli sources confirmed, however, that U.S. investigators believe a high-ranking American may have been involved in the Pollard operation.

They said that belief stemmed from the fact that Pollard, a 32-year-old American Jew, told interrogators his Israeli handlers often gave him identification numbers of highly classified documents they asked him to deliver.

The Americans fear the numbers were provided by a highly placed U.S. official, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In a report last week, the daily newspaper Davar said the FBI suspected Israelis tried to recruit other Americans.

Sunday, the Washington Post quoted U.S. attorney Joseph E. DiGenova as saying the possibility of broader American involvement was raised during Pollard's interrogation.

Farm suicide rate above U.S. average

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — The suicide rate among farmers in five agricultural states has not jumped dramatically during the farm recession, although it exceeds the rate for white male adults, a study says.

The study, which took a year to complete, analyzed data from North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Montana and Wisconsin, said Dr. Robert Wentz, health officer for North Dakota.

In those states, there were 44.2 suicides in 1980 for every 100,000 farmers, according to a North Dakota Health Department statement. The national rate that year was 31 suicides for every 100,000 white men aged 20 or older, a category that included virtually all the farm suicides studied.

The rate dropped to 41.8 in 1981, but increased to 57.5 in 1982, the highest of the six years studied, the statement said. However, it gradually declined in the next three years, dropping to a rate of 41.3 in 1985, the last year covered by the analysis.

Airlines try to head off flight delays

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives from dozens of airlines, told by the government "this is our last chance" to head off a record number of flight delays this summer, gathered Monday to adjust schedules at some of the nation's busiest airports.

Airline officials acknowledged, however, that in some cases they may have difficulty meeting Federal Aviation Administration targets that call for a maximum number of arrivals and departures for each 15-minute period at the five airports under discussion.

The Transportation Department called for extensive shuffling of flights at Hartsfield International Airport in Atlanta and O'Hare Airport in Chicago to spread them out more evenly, and more modest shifting of takeoff and arrival times at Dallas-Fort Worth, Newark and Philadelphia.

Schedules at the Boston and Denver airports also may come under discussion, but the FAA said it sees no overriding problem there for the time being.

In all, according to government and industry estimates, more than 1,000 flights are likely to be shifted, some by only a few minutes, as the special scheduling conference continues through the week.

Senate, House clash in 'mud flap flap'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate and House are clashing over how to deal with trucks that are splashing. It's a mud flap flap.

The dispute is over an item that looks innocent enough in the multibillion-dollar highway bill.

Much public interest in the bill, which Congress hopes to wrap up this week, centers on a provision that could allow motorists on certain highways to drive 65 mph, instead of the current 55 mph limit.

To most of the high-powered lobbyists who spent the last three weeks in crowded hearing rooms watching congressional compromise-seekers strike deals on the legislation, the concern was how the money would be carved up.

But a dispute between Rep. Bob McEwen, R-Ohio, and Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., is an example of one of the dozens of tiny differences in language the two chambers must struggle through to forge a compromise bill.

Their clash involves how to protect the safety of motorists whose visibility is hindered when passing trucks kick up cascades of water.

Study sees 300 lakes becoming acidic

WASHINGTON (AP) — A long-awaited study of acid rain predicts that about 300 lakes in the northeastern United States will become acidic in the next 50 years unless the pollutants that cause the problem are reduced.

The unreleased study by Environmental Protection Agency scientists predicts that lakes in the Southeast will start becoming acidic in that period, but there is what one official called a "nil" chance that lakes in the West will be hurt because of low emissions of the pollutants in question.

Many of the lakes in jeopardy are clustered in southern Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, the study says.

Other vulnerable areas are the Adirondack Mountains of New York, where environmentalists say fish already have been killed by acid rain, and the Pocono Mountains of eastern Pennsylvania.

If the study's prediction is borne out, it would mean almost a doubling of the number of acidic lakes in the Northeast.

These conclusions, discussed by EPA officials familiar with the study, are still tentative.

Good exams hinder cheating

Subjective exams and emphasis on integrity helps

the students." He said that the teacher bears a tremendous responsibility not to "cheat" students by giving "fifth-rate exams."

"I choose to give my examinations always ... in surroundings with which they are acquainted — with no proctoring, where my assistants or I can check in regularly to answer questions, and where I can talk to the students first about the position of trust they are in," said Butler. "I would not agree for the test to be given under tight circumstances that suggest dishonesty."

Locked case
Electrical Engineering came up with a locked case to keep casual passers-by from stealing the homework and tests. And while students might be able to copy homework from others, they would find it very hard to cheat come test time, said Ward. "I will find out on an exam whether they really learned it or not. Old engineers used to say 'You can't lie to the ocean.' Our graduates have to perform when they graduate," he said.

Ward said the department also reassured students that if they were qualified they would be able to enter the program even though that meant larger classes than instructors would prefer. "I think they perceive the gate as a thing we use to keep them out. Our view is different. We don't turn away anyone who will ultimately be successful professionally."

Butler, Hartshorn, McKinnon and Ward all said that if students know how the faculty feels about the various gray areas, then they are willing to abide by the instructor's guidelines. All of them also said that discussing honor and integrity up front was of prime importance. Butler said he reminds students "that there is nothing they can gain on an exam that is worth losing a basis for that trust." He said he makes great effort to instruct, not threaten.

Hartshorn found his students will not tolerate blatant cheating, but may not be as willing to speak out against infractions that are not so blatant.

That there seem to be so many gray areas prompts the question: "Is the honor code clear enough?"

It is now, according to Hartshorn. "The 12 items on the front of the (continuing ecclesiastical endorsement) form are extremely specific. They are frank if not blunt," he said, adding that on the back, a student writes his understanding of the honor code. "When a person has been through the front and back, then they know."

Continuing honesty
The endorsement form states, "I am honest and will continue to be honest in all my behavior. This includes not cheating, plagiarizing, or knowingly giving false information."

The question arises as to how to deal with students caught cheating. A faculty committee in the School of Management is currently evaluating how cheating is to be handled in a way that is fair to the student, instructor and other students, McKinnon said.

"We may not be stressing the positive enough in some departments," said Hartshorn. This would involve teachers commending their classes for integrity.

"We value the individual so highly that we are always looking beyond the incident to the individual."

Hartshorn said usually cheating incidents should be handled at the departmental level because "many instructors feel they have primary responsibility and would see it as part of the teaching process. We would feel we have a personal responsibility to help that person ourselves ... to help them change their value system. It is not easy deciding when to involve Standards."

However, Hartshorn said that perhaps a little more standardization in the approach is needed so that students would not be confused by differing faculty interpretations of what constitutes cheating and how cheating should be dealt with.

Matter of integrity
Faculty leaders said they had great trust in BYU students' integrity. Hartshorn said the honest students should be used as a base to help change those who cheat.

"We have an extremely large number of students who have the integrity — which means we ought to have the base to reach the others. I'm sure we do."

"By no means do we go into a class and assume that everyone or anyone is cheating. My perception is that less than one percent of the students are

Pollster to speak today

Richard B. Wirthlin, best known for his role as a pollster and consultant to President Reagan, will speak on campus today at 4 p.m.

Wirthlin, a former BYU professor of economics at BYU, will discuss "Five Strategic Imperatives for Entrepreneurial Success" in 151 TNRB. The lecture is part of the Entrepreneur Lecture Series.

As one of the country's eminent survey researchers and marketing strategists, Wirthlin is chairman of the board of Decision/Making/Information (D/M/I), a survey research firm he founded in 1969. For his strategy and planning of the 1980 presidential campaign, he was named Advertising Man of the Year by Advertising Age magazine.

About one-half of all the incumbent republican U.S. senators have been Wirthlin's clients. In addition to serving politicians, D/M/I also serves marketers of consumer goods and services, trade organizations, federal agencies and advertising media.

Wirthlin was chairman of the Department of Economics and director of the Survey Research Center at BYU. He also taught at the University of California Medical School at San Francisco and at the University of Southern California.

A native of Salt Lake City, Wirthlin received his doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley in 1964.

Baker counsels Native Americans

LEE SCHOLL
Staff Writer

Americans were told "Indian" is a state of mind, said Howard Rainer, director of BYU American Indian Service, at a conference sponsored by the American Indian Service, Thursday.

"You look back through history and see what happened, you've got credit to those leaders," Rainer said. "I think it is just as important that we have good Indian leaders."

start speaking up.

"It is no longer our position to stay quiet," he said.

Second, native Americans must show that they have self-respect. "Do something with your life and let it count," he said.

Having a vision was third. "Start to look to the vision of the people," he counseled, "to the destiny of our people."

Last, he told his listeners to "stand tall, look good, and respect yourself." Rainer said many people — including those in the federal government — spend half their time deciding who a real Indian is.

He said a lot of Indian people need a more positive attitude about their culture.

"We need to start talking about positions, about the future, about positive things, about what's good about our family and we'll give our young people a positive attitude."

He also said they need to teach the Indian people how to pray, find strength and have faith.

"Faith, that's where real Indians get their strengths," He said that prayer is the Indian way, that the people who prayed are gone, and now they have a generation of non-prayers.

"Indian is a state of mind. As long as we think we're a minority, we are treated minor. If you think you're shy, you'll act it. If you think you have something to offer you will," said Rainer. "You are a state of mind of what you want to be in life."

He said Indians don't usually show off their talents because they are afraid to be criticized. He said they should not be afraid, but should be proud of who they are.

"Look good, act good, be good. Then you'll be proud to be an Indian."

Native Leadership Discussed

LEE SCHOLL
Staff Writer

Bannock County Prosecutor Larry Echohawk, the importance of good Indian leaders at a conference sponsored by the American Indian Service, Thursday.

"You look back through history and see what happened, you've got credit to those leaders," Rainer said. "I think it is just as important that we have good Indian leaders."

Rainer said some problems Indian leaders must face today include a high unemployment rate, a suicide rate higher than the national average, alcoholism, and the testing of tribal government. He said their challenges are many, and asked if they would be able to preserve Indian lands, homes, and political rights and identity.

people rarely have the chance to think of prosperity, yet they want like anyone else said tribal leaders have to think.

Rainer also said the most important thing an Indian leader should have is education.

"Indian people should be positive, that a lot of them are sitting back and blame their situation on everyone else. People should be positive and optimistic about the future holds. In reality, the future lies in your own hands."

Education is an important part of being a leader. "Learn to listen, and learn," said Echohawk.

A good leader is someone who has the attitude of service and is willing to try to be a big honcho. You can't change a law by just talking about it, you have to do the work to change it."

Rainer said confrontation and conflict are the way to get something done.

"You can't blame people for what happened in the past, you need to move into the future — it's a clean slate. A lot of changes and I'm very excited about what the future holds."

Court opens; cases waiting

LAKE CITY (AP) — The court of Appeals officially for business Monday with a 400-case backlog transferred from state Supreme Court.

Judge Reginal W. Garff said some 60 attorneys and state attorneys attending opening ceremony the new court faces a mandate to operate carefully but rule.

Court was created to ease the state court's 1,000-case backlog. 35 cases scheduled for the first two weeks, five have appeal since 1983 and 10 since.

"I can do this," Garff said. "This is achievable if the judges are independent with unity. We'll be making decisions based on shared thinking."

Garff, 59, on the bench are Russell W. Bench, 36; Judith Billings, 43; Richard Charles, 45; Pamela R.T. Green, 38; Norman Heber Jackson, 53; Gregory Keith Orme, 33.

Temple is course to Christ

By TERESA GRAY
Universe Staff Writer

The place to go to learn more of Christ is the LDS Temple, said Marion D. Hanks Friday at the Women's Conference.

"There is a special course that can lead you to Christ. Our understanding of the temple and its significance is not a little trip, but a long journey," said Elder Hanks at the event's devotional address.

"Many of us think that by doing temple work we are doing the greater service for the dead. I have found that the greater blessing comes to those who serve the dead."

Elder Hanks stressed the sacred nature of the temple and said God meant for man to build temples so there would be a dwelling on the earth where God could show himself to man.

"It is in the temples that God manifests himself. In the temple, we walk for a time with one who bought us for a price," he said.

He then read the dedicatory prayer of the Kirtland temple in which the saints are promised those who worship in the temple will be blessed. He added that four promises are made to those who attend the temple.

WOMEN'S CONFERENCE

"We will grow up in God, we will receive the fullness of the Holy Ghost, we will be able to organize our lives and be prepared to obtain every needful thing."

Elder Hanks expressed his love for the women of the church and said that every woman is important.

"Woman differs from man as man differs from man. You are unique in personality and spirit. Every woman is special — somebody of intrinsic value."

We are here to do the will of the Lord, he said, and to do his will we must learn more of him.

"Come unto Christ. Seek Jesus and be faithful in him. Feast upon the words of Christ and they will tell you what to do," he said.

"The enjoyment of life is the consequence of our individual choices. The trail will always lead back to the choice of the individual."

Choices necessary for happiness

By KRISTI LALLI
Universe Staff Writer

Every woman should have the desire and ambition to qualify in two vocations, said Ida Smith Thursday in a Women's Conference lecture.

"That of homemaking and that of preparing to earn a living outside of the home, if and when the occasion requires."

There is a difference between being at home and being mentally housebound, said Smith. Women who know they have the option of staying at home or working outside the home are happier than those who feel they have to be home, she said.

"A gorgeous, spacious house on a hill can be a prison to a woman who is confined there as the only proper place for her to be."

A woman should choose to be at home, she said. "There is nothing wrong with being at home, but if you are at home because you feel there is no other choice, you are denying God's greatest gift to his children — agency."

Homes should not exclude the things of the world, she said. "Where better to learn about and become prepared for the outside world than within the walls of our own home?"

Women of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints need to make their homes a place of refuge for people, Smith said. "The spread of the gospel in all ages has been quickened or slowed to the extent of the members' willingness to open their homes to missionaries and non-members."

Many women use the excuse, "my place is in the home" not to be involved with anything that happens outside the home. "Family concerns and issues do not stop at the front door of your houses," she said.

Because each person's situation is different, women should not compare themselves with others, Smith said. "We must constantly guard against the temptation to assume that where there is a difference, there must automatically be a defect."

Women should not feel guilty if they are doing what they feel they must do and are doing it because they want to. "There is a world of difference between being guilty and feeling guilty. Women are prone to feel guilty when they are not living up to someone else's expectations of what they should be doing."

Right reasons to serve

Peer acceptance binds women

By KERRI SUE LOERTSCHER
Universe Staff Writer

Women must learn to follow the good examples of their peers rather than worry about social acceptance said Karen Lynn Davidson in a speech given during the Women's Conference on Thursday.

Davidson, a former English literature professor at BYU, used the Relief Society in her home ward as an example. "I have a wonderful ward," she said. "But they make me feel inferior and discouraged ... I see them (the members) as far-off intimidating examples instead of good ones."

Davidson said, "Jesus Christ is our ultimate example." He does notice us and watch over us, but he usually sends his examples through another person. "An individual example represents a Christ-like standard."

Davidson said people see peer pressure as a negative concept that causes our young to misbehave. Actually it is "peer acceptance" that one must be concerned with, she said. "Acceptance is what we need to fear."

Davidson said in her ward beautiful fingernails are so common that it has become accepted as part of good grooming. She finds herself sitting in Relief Society counting how many sets of long and polished fingernails are on her row.

"But I have to decide and tell myself that is not for me."

A question Davidson raised was if one's peers are active members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints then couldn't peer acceptance represent a high standard? Maybe it could, but then it would plateau. People would begin to outwardly do things just to look good.

"Doing everything properly falls short of the standards of Jesus Christ," Davidson said. "This is not a gospel of being, it is a gospel of becoming."

According to Davidson, this life would become very exhausting if "we had to put on a new face, like a mask" each day. "Authenticity and individuality are wonderful qualities," Those qualities and becoming confident that "you don't have to pass an audition" are the concepts a person must work for.

Davidson said in literature evil is more interesting than good. "In real life the reverse is true. We are drawn to the good." Two profoundly different people can both be good. "To settle for nothing higher than social acceptance is a mistake," she said. "The responsibility is on us to know the difference."

Mothers shape religious identities

By JANET L. FISHER
Universe Staff Writer

A mother can cultivate a child's religious identity if she understands the emotional and psychological factors that influence the child's relationship to God, said a BYU professor.

"A mother needs to help the child discover who he is and where he belongs in the world around him," said Marie Cornwall, BYU assistant professor of sociology.

She said a child is constantly developing perspectives on how to think about and deal with the world. If the child is to include God in his thinking, then a mother must make sure the child understands the relationship he should have with his heavenly parents, explained Cornwall during a speech made Thursday for the BYU Women's Conference.

"A child's religious identity is influenced by interaction between other children, family members, school and church." According to Cornwall, a child needs to have a correct understanding of why and what God is or he will not put God in his life. If a mother is able to explain this to the child, he will.

Cornwall described three main elements necessary in developing a child's religious identity. The first is to teach the child the plan of salvation through stories, conversations and doctrines. "Parents need to show the child that they too are doing what is right and are following the counsel they have given the child."

The second element is to teach the child the commandments he should believe in and follow. Once the child has been taught what is expected of him, he needs to know that obedience to these commandments will help to develop his relationship with God, said Cornwall.

The third element is the process of socialization. The child needs to locate his area in the church's social system. "Priesthood and womanhood are the two organizations which help the child develop the faith he has learned about." Cornwall said these three elements are involved in a child's loss of faith. "The child begins to disbelieve the knowledge he has been taught and therefore doesn't obey the commandments he has learned, and commits sin."

A.F. police arrest nine

AMERICAN FORK, Utah (AP)—A three-month undercover operation has culminated in the arrests of nine northern Utah County residents on drug trafficking charges, authorities say.

The eight men and one woman were arrested in recent days following a joint investigation by county authorities and officers from the American Fork, Pleasant Grove and Lehi police departments, said Detective John Durrant.

Charged in 8th Circuit Court were Jason W. Larson, 20; David Allen

Cox, 20; Ronnie Dee Land, 27; Anthony C. Barnes, 21; and Steven Paul Zimmerman, 22, all of Lehi; John Morris Hutchison, 21, of Pleasant Grove; Tony L. Smith, 20, Lindon; Ken G. Gurney, 26, and LaVee Lux Gurney, 45, both of Provo.

Police are seeking a tenth suspect, who is wanted for investigation of distributing methamphetamine for value near an elementary school in American Fork. American Fork Police Chief Randy Johnson said he believes the arrests will have a demoralizing affect on the local drug community.

Find out next Tuesday at the Brigham Awards Forum

The truth is finally out. The legendary vaults of Brigham Young do exist.

Buried deep below the BYU campus, the vaults may contain valuable relics, ancient church documents, and other untold secrets.

Herrendo Revolver will lead a crew of experts on an expedition to answer these and other crucial questions of paramount interest.

Excavation on the vaults will take place on March 24 and will be televised in the Marriott Center as the discovery takes place. So join the Herrendo and his demolition crew during the Brigham Awards Forum.

"Dance," "Team Dance" and the "Pipe Dance" are traditional favorites that will be performed.

Other dances, "Dance Right Here" and "Dance Right There," feature the entire company performing into the audience.

The Lamanite Generation will feature medleys of the Poly-nesian, Tahitian and the Polynesian cultures of the Polynesian

Discount air fares carry restrictions

BOB ZINGMARK
Staff Writer

The tempting low air fares agencies are now offering, students searching for airline bargain should be aware of the small-print restrictions placed on discount tickets.

The cheaper the fare, the more restrictions apply. The restrictions generally require purchase at least two days in advance, round-trip travel, a Saturday night stay over, no Friday or Sunday flights, and no refund once the ticket has been paid for.

Yadon said some of the advertisements seem misleading. "People don't listen or read the fine print so it causes problems when they try to book a flight."

Tickets can be purchased, with the above restrictions, for as low as $118 for a round-trip ticket to California; $118 to Seattle, Wash.; $158 to Kansas City, Miss.; $198 to Tampa, Fla.; and $198 to New York.

There are a limited number of discount seats on all of the major airlines and tickets are sold on a first-come, first-served basis. After the allotment of discount tickets is sold, the rest of the seats go for full fare.

Carol Yadon, manager of a local travel agency said so far they have not had any problems with people not being able to purchase discount tickets. "As long as they meet all of the restriction requirements we are able to make flight arrangements."

Students may not be concerned about travel right now, but in three weeks when they are planning on flying home for the summer, availability may be scarce.

Although none of the airlines will disclose how many discount seats are offered for specific flights, airlines are selling anywhere from 10 to 35 percent of all seats at a discount rate.

All discount fares are available through mid-May, after which they are expected to rise. Students should also be aware of the price hike over the Easter break.

Students unprepared for career after college

By KIMBERLY HAWES
Universe Staff Writer

Most students spend four to five years in college, investing thousands of dollars for a "quality" education, only to find upon graduating that they forgot to learn one important subject — how to get a job.

To combat this problem, the Counseling and Development Center in 149, SWKT, teaches a two-credit career education course each semester. The subject matter of the course covers an in-depth evaluation of the students' career goals and how they can prepare effectively for the transition from the college setting to the workplace.

"Students spend from $40,000 to $60,000 for training, then don't know how to successfully interface with the world of work," said Lynn Johnson, teacher of a career education class. "This is one course that can apply to practically every student."

The upper-division course is offered to junior and seniors to assist them with the "future beyond the classroom," according to Johnson.

"Students don't realize the time, money and effort that's needed to get a job," he said. "The employer isn't going to sit back and wait for them."

Johnson said that a "job campaign" must be followed through. This includes letters, phone calls, personal visits, and lots of persistence.

The course tells students how to sell their talents effectively, teaching them skills that will not only get them an entry-level job, but will help them progress in their career throughout their lives.

Johnson said the course may also be beneficial to students in the future in cases of disability or death that would force unemployed people to find a job, or re-entry into the workplace after being laid off.

"The BYU Placement Center does a great job, but many students have to go beyond campus for their career goals," said Johnson.

More than 2,000 students at BYU have taken this class in the past three years, with feedback from course evaluations being positive.

"It worked," said one participant. "I used the techniques we learned in class and I got the job."

"I found it very applicable to the real world of job searching," said another class member. "It has increased my knowledge 'enfold.'"

The course is taught every semester, including spring and summer. Students interested in taking the course should sign up for Career Education 317.

BYU visiting writer, poet Leslie Norris, to give reading, tell literary experiences

Distinguishing poet and BYU visiting writer, Leslie Norris, will read from his work and tell anecdotes of his literary experiences in Wales and the U.S. on Thursday evening in Salt Lake.

Norris will share his reminiscences of growing up in Wales under the influence of Dylan Thomas and the rich Welsh poetic tradition.

Norris has published many books of poetry and short stories and been widely published in the "New Yorker," "Atlantic Monthly" and other magazines and journals.

This reading will be a fundraiser for "Writers at Work," the annual creative writing conference held in Park City the last week in June.

Currently in its third year, "Writers at Work" has established a national reputation.

The non-profit group brings in nationally known writers to work with both beginning and advanced writers who come to Utah from both within and outside of the state.

This year's workshops and classes will host such notable writers as Frederick Busch, Alan Cheuse, Joy Williams, Will Baker, Charles Wright, Rita Dove, Stephen Dunn, Ron Carlson and literary agents and editors from major publishing houses and magazines such as the "New Yorker," "Esquire" and the "Paris Review."

Refreshments and live entertainment will be offered at the event.

Seating is limited with tickets available at the Dolores Chase Fine Art Gallery, Waking Owl Bookstore and Cosmic Aeroplane.

The price of admission will also include an autographed copy of his latest book, "Selected Poems."

Norris will speak at the Dolores Chase Fine Art Gallery on 143 1/2 Pierpont Avenue in Salt Lake City at 7 p.m.

Another Chase Gallery poetry reading to raise funds for Writers at Work will be held April 25 with poet Mark Strand reading and autographing one of his latest works.

Information about the "Writers at Work" conference is available from the director, James Thomas 335-0264 or Writers at Work, P.O. Box 8857, SLC, Utah 84108.

M inspired BYU gymnast

ALERIE REYES
Senior Sports Writer

One of the most aspiring gymnasts began her career at a young age, Cougar gymnast Rex Hughes opened his to the sport at age 14. Hughes' interest for the sport was during his freshman year in high school. "Every once in a while I would see television and see gymnastics on rock bands, movies or commercials," Hughes said. "After I would watch a gymnast go downstairs and teach a back handspring. That's how my interest began." Hughes, a friend encouraged Hughes to join the gymnastics club to take part in the private gymnasium in his home town of Jefferson, Mo. It was there that Hughes found himself to be the sole member at the club. When attending BYU, Hughes joined the Cougar gymnastic team as a walk-on during his freshman year. "I was told by BYU Coach Wayne Hughes was not very impressive. A walk-on usually doesn't stay very long. I saw no potential in (Hughes) and I didn't work with him very much. He couldn't do anything," Hughes said. "But after a year Hughes suffered a knee injury which gradually got worse and hindered him from any progress."

BYU gymnast Rex Hughes was a walk-on to the squad and later qualified for the NCAA championships.

Nevertheless, Hughes continued to compete throughout the year and that year with spectacular performances on the vault, qualifying for the NCAA's on that event. Hughes later had back surgery which kept him out for several months, but he decided to serve a mission and moved to the Boise Idaho Mission. He returned to BYU in October to prepare himself for the upcoming 86-87 season. According to Hughes, it has not been easy getting back into shape after returning from his mission. "It's been really hard, but once I was in shape it wasn't so bad, although I'm still not back to 100 percent." Even though Hughes claims not to be 100 percent, his performances so far this season have been spectacular. He is a strong contributor as an all-around star and has led the team with consistently high scores. "I feel pretty good about my performances so far, but there's still a few things I could improve." Hughes feels improvement is needed on his pommel horse routine as well as sticking his landings on all events. He is also struggling to get back some of the more difficult skills on the floor exercise that he had before his mission. Overall, Hughes feels, Hughes has been doing very well. "He got off to a slow start with just coming off his mission and being out of shape. But he's done real well and gets better each meet," said Young. "He's very consistent and I'm always confident that he will hit every routine."

Rugby team destroys Northern Arizona; on a roll with five game winning streak

ASA WILLARDSON
Senior Sports Writer

The BYU Rugby team is on a five game winning streak, blowing out Northern Arizona University Saturday afternoon in Provo, 19-0. After capturing the crown at the BYU Invitational two weeks ago with a four-game sweep, the Cougars upset the Terriers, who were ranked No. 7 in their Pacific Division. The Cougars (NAU) had several scoring chances but they were converted, according to BYU Coach Lance Watene. The Cougars dropped passes, had mishandling problems and a weak defense didn't help. "We didn't expect BYU to do so well with NAU's reputation and the tough league they play in, but BYU contested in all phases of play and dominated the game from start to finish," commented Watene. According to Watene, BYU loose forward Scott Steiner played aggressive tackling and created a lot of opportunities for BYU to score. In addition, Kevin Donnelly, who plays prop and is a superior front row player, tackled all day long and fought for possession of the ball," added Watene. Two up and coming players that Watene feels have improved drastically over the season are halfback Kevin Orr and David Brinton who plays lock. "Kevin has been running more with the ball showing aggressive playing and David has dominated the line-out play." This Saturday at 2:00 p.m. at Haws Field the Rugby team will face the Haggis Rugby team. The Haggis team is a men's all-star team from Salt Lake comprised of graduates from schools such as BYU, The University of Utah, Weber, Utah State and Boston College. "BYU is going to have a hard time on Saturday against the Haggis team. They're big, experienced and very aggressive. But, BYU can compete with them if we limit our mistakes, concentrate on the ball and remember the basics," commented Watene. BYU will conclude their 1986-87 season with four remaining games. On March 28 BYU will face UNLV in Provo. On April 4 the rugbys will play the University of Utah at Salt Lake City and conclude with NAU on April 20 in Flagstaff, Ariz.

BYU's women's tennis team trounces University of Colorado

After defeating the University of Colorado 6-0, the BYU's women's tennis team ended its win streak to 12 straight days after noon, and captured its third round robin invitational tournament.

Before the pre-arrangement the teams were scheduled to scratch the doubles play if the match was decided in singles. Lesley Hakala, the Cougars No. 1 singles player, suffered muscle spasms in both her upper legs before the match, but was forced to stay in the lineup and compete since Michelle Orr is nursing a pulled muscle that she injured last week. Hakala had a long first set with Colorado's senior Kathleen Heckman and lost 4-6. Hakala then came back strong and took the second set 6-2 and then had to play catch-up to win the third set in an 8-6 tiebreaker. "Lesley had a very tough match. I wasn't planning on using her," said BYU Coach Ann Valentine. "She played an all-out type game. She was unable to get under the low balls because she was in so much pain. I have to give her a lot of credit," Valentine said.

BYU has played five matches in six days and Valentine was concerned what toll this would have on the girls. "I can't give them enough credit for hanging in there," said Valentine. "They are a championship caliber team, play is excellent, and they are playing great tennis." BYU takes its 18-3 record on the road to compete in the North Carolina Invitational in Chapel Hill. All the teams BYU plays are ranked in the Top Twenty-five. UNC is No. 25, Duke is No. 22, and Kentucky is No. 20.

LDS doctrine advocates equality

By LAURI HOFMANN
Universe Staff Writer

Although advocates of the women's movement believe the Latter-day Saint society discriminates against women, this discrimination is not inherent in the doctrines of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said a BYU professor Friday.

"Sexual discrimination is in Mormon society not because it is in our doctrines, but because we live too much in the world," said A.D. Sorensen, professor of political science. Sorensen spoke on equality in the Lord's kingdom in conjunction with the Women's Conference.

God has a perfect love for us, said Sorensen, and if inequality were a part of the order of God's plan,

"it would corrupt that notion of divine love."
Sorensen said men and women are equal because, to God, we are "equally everything, equally nothing and equally unworthy."

Sorensen said we are equally everything because the scope, range and strength of God's love encompasses everybody, and the resurrection of every person, made possible by Jesus Christ, is proof of the strength of that love.

We are equally nothing and equally unworthy because "if we trace back to the ultimate ground of our existence, we come to the fact that every aspect of human existence was made possible in every way by God," said Sorensen.

"We have a high intrinsic value before God, but we can't be worthy of our intrinsic worth because we didn't earn it."

LDS settlers' move to Canada difficult

By MEGAN CORDON
Universe Staff Writer

Wives of LDS polygamists sacrificed to move to Canada during the 1880s and 1890s, said an LDS women's history expert Friday.

Maureen Ursenbach Beecher said many polygamist families moved to colonies in Southern Alberta, Canada because the anti-polygamist movement in the United States threatened them.

The LDS group settled around Cardston, Alberta. Beecher said there were two cultures in the area.
"There were Mormon towns and Gentile towns."

She said the LDS people never fit in with the other residents of the area.
They invited non-members into their homes, but the invitations were rarely reciprocated. She cited polygamy as one reason for this but said it was not the only reason.

"Mormons came with a different lifestyle," she said. While most of their neighbors were Canadian, three-fourths of the Latter-day Saints were from the United States.

Many other LDS settlers were British or Scandinavian.

Beecher said the women thought the country was lonely and empty and never felt at home there. "The Mormons were always ambiguous about where was really home."

Beecher said LDS people made the seven week trip from Alberta to Utah more often than would be expected.

Some women made the trip each time they were pregnant so the babies were born in Utah instead of Alberta.
Couples often traveled to Utah to be married in the temple.

Beecher said that LDS women's responses to polygamy were varied.
"Some women felt threatened by polygamous marriages, others welcomed it." She said relationships in plural marriages were as varied as those in monogamous marriages.

God's order evident in creating roles

By LAURI HOFMANN
Universe Staff Writer

The need for order extends unto all of God's creations, and part of this order is differing roles for men and women, said a BYU political science professor Friday in conjunction with the Women's Conference.

"A system of order implicitly assumes that there will be differences in tasks," said Donna Lee Bowen, "Men and women have symmetrical functions."

Women are not denied access to blessings because they do not hold the priesthood, she said. "Holding a priesthood office is not necessary to getting into the Celestial Kingdom.
Women are not denied access to the spirit of Christ because they do not have the priesthood. The spirit of the Lord is there for all, and priesthood comes from that power."

Problems occur only when positions in the church are seen as status symbols. "Access to the spirit is not guaranteed by an office in the church.
The principle of priesthood is one of service."

Bowen said people have essentially two tasks to perform on this earth:
first, to be proven worthy to return to God's presence; and second, to multiply and replenish the earth.

"In addition to bringing life into this world, we have a responsibility to guide it," she said.

Bowen said that the task women have of replenishing the earth must be seen as a necessary part of an eternal goal. She said the order of things imposed upon women is both eternal and immediate.

"Part of maturity is accepting order that is not of our own making," Bowen said.

In order to help us see the order in things and to gain strength to accomplish our individual tasks, Bowen said the spirit of Christ was given to us for our assistance.

"We must request strength, comfort and serenity from the Lord," she said.

Prof. hit by golf ball; questions class safety

By COLLEEN AMES
Universe Staff Writer

An unsuspecting BYU professor felt the sting of a golfer's uncontrolled swing while standing in the parking lot of Cougar Stadium last week.

John Weiss, a professor of design, was standing in the east parking lot of the football stadium while a BYU golf class was practicing in the field across the street.

"When I first got out of the car, a golf ball came rolling across the parking lot," he said. "I picked it up and saw another one laying near it. Then I was standing there talking to my wife and I got hit in the elbow with a golf ball. It hurt."

The fields that BYU's golf classes practice in are located in busy areas. One is located just south of the Smith Fieldhouse and the other is south of the football stadium.

According to Dr. Garth Fisher, director of the Human Performance Research Center and golf instructor, precautions are taken to make it as safe as possible for everyone.

"Considering the 300-500 golf students enrolled in classes each semester, and the thousands of balls hit every year here, we have a very safe program. Even people on golf courses get hit," Fisher said.

Although safety is stressed in the golf classes, there are occasional accidents in which students are hit with clubs, Fisher said.

"Our first lecture in every golf class is on safety," he said. "Even good golfers have had shots once in a while though."

Jim George, a graduate assistant in promotional health from Rigby, Idaho, is the instructor of the intermediate golf class that was in progress when Weiss was hit. "It's not the fault of the student, it's not the fault of the instructor — it's not anyone's fault," he said. "You just can't always control where the ball goes sometimes."

"I make it clear to my students at the start of class that it's not a funny matter to hit a ball over the fence. Maybe the student who did it didn't want to tell me because of that," he said.

During his three years as a golf instructor at BYU, George has seen quite a few near misses. He also saw a direct hit to a vehicle.

According to Fisher, golf instructors take all the necessary precautions they can to see that no one will be hurt, including restrictions on the clubs that can be used and the direction players are to shoot.

According to a secretary in the PE Sports office, because of the danger to tennis players on the SFH A courts, no tennis classes are scheduled during the times golf classes are in session.

Still, there's no way to control the occasional ball that is hit wrong, said Fisher. "It's a difficult class to teach in any situation, but we've tried to be as careful as we can," he said.

Weiss disagrees. "The restrictions they place on the students and what irons they can use aren't strong enough. Anybody who knows how to hit a golf ball correctly, can hit the ball over the fence easily with the irons they use. They either need to quit playing golf or provide more protection."

As for Weiss' elbow — it is recovering. Weiss does have a suggestion for anyone planning to travel in the vicinity where a golf class is being conducted though. "I would enter the area with great caution and maybe some protective gear — elbow pads at least."

Families visit hospital; expectant mother tour

By COLLEEN AMES
Universe Staff Writer

Take nine children, four expectant moms, two nervous dads, a wheelchair, a stuffed, worn out kangaroo and Vernita Nuttall, director of education at American Fork Hospital and you've got all the ingredients for a "Kangaroo Hop."

The "Hop" takes place once a month at American Fork Hospital. It's a sibling party that gives children and parents an idea of what is going to happen to mom when she goes to the hospital to have her baby.

Kim Davidson of American Fork took her family to the "Hop" the night before she had her baby two months ago. "My kids loved it — they thought it was great. My two-year-old loved holding the kangaroo and getting all the attention. My husband even enjoyed it. I wish I'd done it with all of them," Davidson said.

Nuttall acts as tour guide for the "Kangaroo Hop." "The tour tells about the hospital and some of the procedures — it's for parents as much as it is for the kids," she said.

The labor and delivery room, where Mom will have the baby, is the first stop on the tour. A visit to the nursery is next, and everyone gets to look at the new babies. "This is where your new brother or sister will be staying at first," explains Nuttall to the children.

Next is the room where Mom will be staying after she's had the baby. Visiting hours are discussed and there's an opportunity to ask questions to nurses on the floor.

The last stop on the tour is the same-day surgery unit for punch and cookies. Nuttall hands out certificates to the tourists and everyone watches a video on how to bathe a baby.

"I really enjoyed the tour," said Bob Marsh, whose wife Diane is expecting their fifth child. "It's good for the kids. They have a lot of questions and sometimes I'm not even sure what the answers are."

When asked what their favorite part of the tour was, Alysa Marsh, 13, said she liked the nursery best. Her 9-year-old brother Bobby's favorite part of the tour, "the cookies."

There's no age limit for participants, according to Nuttall. "We've got anywhere from 2-year-olds who pay no attention because they're so busy, on up. It's really a fun thing."
